Notes

Letter to the Society for Promoting Agriculture, Manchester, dated 24 Dec. 1787, on Walter's discovery of the new grass, about 1 Feb. 1786 "among a variety of other plants, collected in a wood near home ...". Walter said of the grass "This species of grass will probably be found to unite the two genera of cornucupiae and alopecurus, it having a univalvular corolla, and being without the involucre of the one and the beard or arista of the other ..."
